

Personal Student Data Websites

www.myspace.com, www.facebook.com, and other similar sites:

1. Accessing these websites during the regular school day will be considered in violation of acceptable student conduct.
2. Under no circumstances should a student feel at liberty to visit such sites, regardless of whether the instructor has specifically “forbidden” the activity or not. The responsibility is the student’s!
3. Violation of the above will result in due process for technology violation.
4. Posting of inappropriate material on any website by one student in reference to another student, regardless of the home school of the affected student, is a violation of privacy, and incidences will be dealt with appropriately, not only with school authorities, but also law enforcement, when applicable.
5. The administration of the school will endeavor to safeguard the security and privacy of each and every student or employee; therefore, any violations which amount to Adverse Impact on any student(s) will be addressed with due process. Government employees, such as school district employees, fall under specific legal coverage, so students should be extremely cautious in this area of technology.
6. Students and parents of minor students are asked to remember that affected students may seek redress with law enforcement, which is outside the realm and jurisdiction of the school.
7. Instructors will be asked to monitor students as they use the computers and to ascertain daily which students have access to which computers. In addition our technology coordinator will be utilized in researching the history of usage per computer.
8. Each computer records a detailed history of date and time when used. A record of all sites visited, per date and time can be printed.

To Each Parent and Student:

Northview High School continues to strive to have the best resources available in order for the students to have the same competitive edge as other students in our district and state. If not abused, computers are like almost all other inventions, used to enhance the quality of life. The administration urges each and every student to accept his/her responsibility in utilizing these wonderful resources in an acceptable educational use.
